OURS THE RICHEST COUNTRY

SOME FIGURES OF THE WEALTH OF THE UNITED STATES,

Incomes of the Rulers of Europe Excelled by the Incomes of Private Citizens Here -Our Exports Would Support the World's Navies-Millions for Jewels.

The United States is the wealthiest country in the world. In the brief span of its young life this infant nation of ours has proken all records relating to the accumulation of riches, and we are beginning to think in billions instead of millions. Take it any way you like, and the measure of our affluence outstrips anything that has ever been known before:

Our country has more actual money, more gold, a larger volume of exports, greater banking facilities, richer farms, more productive mines, more railroads, more internal commerce, more millionaires, more well to do tradesmen, more independent farmers, more highly paid laborers and a greater distribution of the luxuries which riches bring than any other nation has ever enjoyed since time began.

One day last October Uncle Sam had gathered into his money storehouse in Washington the greatest amount of gold ever collected at one place in the history of the world-gold representing $871,893,899. This was indeed a high water mark. had there in one little room more gold than was in circulation in Great Britain. The largest receipt ever given, the greatest money trust ever undertaken in history. was when the present Treasurer of the United States, Charles H. Treat, went into office. He receipted to Ellis H. Roberts, the retiring Treasurer, for all the money and securities in the vaults of the Treasury a total of $1,259,598,278.58. It required from July 1 to September 5 to count the money, and at the completion of the task the accounts balanced to a fraction.

The costliest governmental establishment in the world is the British Navy, upon which a billion and a half has been expended within the last ten years. Yet three individual Americans-Rockefeller, Carnegie and Clark-could have paid the whole bill and still have some pocket money left. The United States is now spending about a hundred millions a year on its navy, and we are new at this kind of expenditure. That we are not investing more than we can afford is show. . the fact that our dis play loving would spent a hundred million dollars for diamonds purchased in foreign lands during the last two years. In fact we are so rich that the sales of produce and manufactured articles that we are sending abroad each year is equal to a sum sufficient to support all the navies in the world.

When it comes to individual wealth we have a dozen citizens who are worth more than all the kings and rulers of the world, taken collectively or severally. The Czar of Russia is reputed to have a greater income than any other living man, but his private fortune is so mixed up with the governmental revenues that it is impossible to separate them If a distinction could be made John D. Rockefeller could undoubtedly make a comparison with the weak spined Nicholas, and show the biggest pile. The Russian monarch's wealth is the accumulation of an empire, centuries old in the making, while the Ohio oil magnate can remember when he had nothing.

Leopold King of the Belgians is the richest monarch in Europe after the Czar. Although his income from the State is but $1,700,000 a year, his business interests are so large and his income from the Congo Free State so great that it is estimated he gathers in quite five millions annually. Senator Clerk has an income that is at least three times as great. The Montana copper king's New York residence will cost more than the Belgian sovereign will take in during the next twelve months.

Edward VII. receives $470,000 a year, and the entire royal family of England is provided for in the civil lists with incomes aggregating $900,000. Mr. Carnegie spends more money for the founding of institutes and the endowment of libraries and schools each year than the whole royal family of England can command.

Alfonso XIII., King of decadent Spain, has $1,400,000 a year to provide the style.

Alfonso XIII., King of decadent Spain, has $1,400,000 a year to provide the style that should surround a king, but Col. John Jacob Astor could easily outsquander this youthful monarch if he felt so disposed. The Kaiser receives a small annual allowance, only $650,000, so that either William K. Vanderbilt or August Belmont has more ready money at his disposal than Germany's Emperor.

Fully one-half of the railway mileage of the world is in the United States and we possess one-third of all the world's banking power. An accurate measurement of our monetary strength shows that we are really in a class by ourselves, and in many respects actually assuming the proportions of a worthy rival of all the rest of Christendom combined. No wonder Europe veiws our growth with alarm and would like to talk us into a war with Japan or some other power in the hope of having us crippled.

To any that the total valuation of this other power in the hope of having us crippled.

To say that, the total valuation of the wealth of the United States is $107,000,000,000 is not understandable. A hundred billion dollars is such a pile of money that the mind aimply cannot grasp its meaning on the instant. It is more than twice the total amount of the wealth of the United Kingdom, of France, or of Germany; and over three times that of Russia or of Austra-Hungary. Probably the best way of illustrating the actual extent of Uncle Sam's riches is to state that if he could convert all his assets into money he would have nearly four times as much as would be required to pay off the entire national debt of all the Governments in the world, including his own.

The estimates of all the visible wealth of our country do not take into account the probable future returns on our investments nor the future value of our undeveloped resources. Even the wildest enthusiast could not tell that. And how thusiast could not tell that. And how many of our business men, how many of our farmers, would sell out for exactly what they have invested in their business? Not many, you may be sure. It is equally certain that if Uncle Sam could be materialized into a national personality he would decline to sell out for $107,000,000,000.

We paid more than half a billion dollars to run the machinery of the Federal Government last year, but when the final balances were struck the taxes collected were over twenty-five millions in excess of the expenditures. Although our Treasury is bulging with wealth, if Congress should pass an inheritance tax is w, such as the President favors, the bulk of the great fortunes of our millionaires would eventually revert to the Government. This regulation to control swollen fortunes by making them revert to the State would give us funds to prosecute such schemes by making them revert to the State would give us funds to prosecute such schemes for public improvement as would dwarf the most pretentious creations of all the builders of history.

Even as it is, our national wealth has already soared higher than the imaginings of the most sanguing of our early optimists. To what extent it will yet go even the most astute of living men can only conjecture.

For the last few days a large number of persons have been watching with interest the moving of the five story double apartment house from the corner of South Fourth ment house from the corner of South Fourth and Havemeyer streets, Williamsburg, to Marcy avenue and Second street, three blooks away. The house movers before removing the house from its foundation lacked it up well. They say that not a brick will be loosened. They expect to place it in position in a day or two. The house was in the way of the new Grand street extension which is to be made for the Williams urg bridge place.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE WOMEN Report That the Propaganda They Oppler Isn't Gaining.

The executive committee of the New York State Association Opposed to the Extension of Suffrage to Woman, in its annual report, says that the outlook for the success of the suffrage movement is far less a matter of apprehension to-day than it was when the agitation was first taken up.

"No one now appearing on the scene for the first time," says the report, "would dream of the methods and extreme views of the early suffragists. The conventions held to-day are characterized by the discussion of general subjects, and the calmness with which they are conducted commends the underlying principle to the unthinking, who forget that the very idea of woman suffrage is antagonistic to the fundaments principle upon which a democratic govern-

State two bills were defeated in the last Legislature—one which would allow women taxpayers in third class cities to vote on questions of appropriations and the other which provided for a concurrent resolution proposing a woman's suffrage amendment to the State Constitution.

The report calls attention to the fact that the opposition association had its inception in the stress and emergency of 1894, when the last constitutional convention was held. The suggestion is made that it may be a good thing to consider forming committees in every city of the State in anticipation of the next convention which will be held eight years hence.

The opposition association has never allowed itself to be "dragged into the arena of public debate," but the executive committee is satisfied that the organization's eleven years of "quiet and conservative work has not allowed crystallized the conviction in our State of the undesirability of woman suffrage, but has impressed the entire country."

The weacutive committee mentions the

The executive committee mentions the rejection of woman suffrage in Oregon for the second time, the increased adverse vote in the last Iowa Legislature, the defeat of a bill in Ohio, the decline in the number women who vote on school propositions Minnesota as indicating the good work of women who vote on school propositions in Minnesota as indicating the good work of the association.

"There are," says the report, "two vital points of interest connected with woman suffrage. One, in Australia, where it has prevailed for a number of years, and where, on August 29, the Legislative Council of Victoria voted down for the fourteenth time the proposal to confer the right of parliamentary suffrage on women.

"The other point is to be found in our own country. It is here that woman suffrage has failed most conspicuously and where, after twelve years experiment, it is quoted as a complete failure. Some women have gloried in having sat in the legislative halls of Colorado and of having been political bosses,' but this glory has lately been overshadowed by a feeling that no woman would again be nominated for a legislative office, it being rumoved that neither of the chief political parties will ever consider having women sit in legislative councils again."

Mrs. Lyman Abbott is president of the opposition association and Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge first vice-president.

POLICE HORSES MAKE NEWS. Dump Out Two Cops and a Prisoner and

Terrence McGowan, the policeman regularly assigned to drive the wagon, had been excused so that he could get his dinner and Roundsman James King was detaile to answer the call. Returning with the prisoner the horses attached to the patrol wagon became frightened on Lexington avenue near Fifty-first street and bolted They dashed around the corner and turned east on Fifty-first street, running up on the north sidewalk and banging against a lamppost. The shock threw Roundsman King from his seat, and the prisoner fell out of the wagon with Malloy landing on top of her. The woman escaped injury but Malloy and Roundsman King were not so fortunate. King suffered a broken collarbone and internal injuries, while Malloy's knee was cut and he was generally bruised Flower Hospital and the surgeon hurried the roundsman and the policeman to the hospital. Jennie Devine thought she should be taken to a hospital instead of a cell, and said that she thought a brick house had fallen on her. Dr. Lutten, the imbulance surgeon, examined her and found that she was not in j ured in the least.

Policeman Malloy was found to have not been very badly hurt, and after his wounds were dressed he was allowed to go home on sick leave. Roundsman King was placed in a ward at the hospital and it will

After the three had been thrown from the wagon the horses continued east on Fifty-first street and turned south on First avenue. They were stopped at Forty-seventh streeet by several young men. The wagon was badly smashed and had to be sent to the repair shop.

The same team was on duty last night when a call came from Forty-ninth street and First avenue, where Policeman Murback had arrested a drunken woman. On the return to the station the team ran down Mrs. Alice Prunty, 55 years old, of 345 East Forty-fifth street. Driver McGowan says that the woman became bewildered and ran directly in front of the team. Mrs. Prunty was attended by Dr. Lutten and found to have not been very much injured. She was removed to her home.

MONEY STOLEN FROM HER MUFF

HOW A GIRL WAS ROBBED WHEN SHE WASN'T LOOKING

And How She Pursued a Man Without Avail and Then Went to Sleuthing on Her Own Account.—She Landed a Prisoner After Publishing & Deceiving Ad.

Miss Esther Beekman, who lives at 213 East Eighteenth street, considers it an unlucky moment when the diamond studded clasp on her left garter became unfastened It was to that accident she attributes the

The story of her loss came out in th Yorkville police court yesterday when the young woman appeared there to charge Frank Robalowski, a cigarmaker of 417 East Sixtleth street, with taking her money She went to the bank on January 2 and drew out $335, which she proposed to use in her business of selling diamonds on com-mission. Some of her jewels now sparkle on the persons of Judge Rosalsky, Justices Greenbaum and Herman Joseph and various other prominent men. After getting the money at the bank she made a roll of the bills and stuffed them in her mink muff While passing through Eighth street near Second avenue she felt something give way.

There was only one man anywhere near, and as he appeared to be middle aged and was wearing eyeglasses she decided to go ahead with the adjusting.

So as to have both hands free she pu her must on the picket of a nearby fence and thoughtlessly left the roll of bills partly sticking out. It took longer than she had and thoughtlessly left the roll of bills partly sticking out. It took longer than she had expected and the approaching man came up before she had finished.

When she finished the job she took her must and saw that the money was gone. It must have been the man that just passed who took it, she thought. In a moment she was running after him, but he saw her coming and ran too. He turned the corner into Second avenue, and when she got there he was out of sight.

After thinking the matter over for a few days she decided to play detective. She put an ad in the East Side newspapers saying that a poor widow suffering from tuberculosis had dropped $335 at Second avenue and Eighth street. The money was to take the slok widow to Colorado for her health. Any information about finding it would be thankfully received.

"If sympathy don't put me on the thief's trail I'm mistaken," she said to a friend. She received information that one Robalowsky, a cigar dealer, seemed to be unusually flush with money. Dressing herself in old clothes she went to the East Sixtieth street house and made inquiries among the tenants, and then talked with the cigarmaker's mother-in-law.

"Let the poor widow keep a good heart," she says the mother-in-law declared to her. "I was troubled with sickness and it cost my son-in-law Frank $50 for the doctor. He received his reward and now has six times what he paid for my sickness." Miss Beekman learned that the cigarmaker was in financial difficulties before she lost the money. She went to Police Headquarters and said she had found the man. Detective Stanford went out and arrested him Saturday night.

In court yesterday the prisoner declared that he had not taken the money from the must. He said he had found a $5 bill that day on Orchard street, and that gave rise to the report among his neighbors that he had become rich.

It was thought advisable to have some of the neighbors in court, so the hearing was adjourned to Wednesday. Magistrate

It has been determined to expend $1,000,000 on the structure and architects were selected several months ago as the result of a competition in which a dozen or more of the leading architects of the country took part. The design submitted by the successful competitors, Cram, Goodhue & Ferguson, was not adopted as offered. From it one plan after another has been developed, until now the twelfth, according to Dr. Stires, "seems completely to satisfy a very exacting committee." The vestry, however, has finally to pass upon the plans, and as soon as favorable action has been taken by it upon any design sketches are to be submitted to the members of the congregation, who will at the same time be asked to subcribe the half million dollars yet lacking.

DEADLOCK ON SENATOR LIKELY Goddard Seems to Have Lost Two Votes to Celt in Rhode Island Legislature.

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 13 .- There is every indication that on the first ballot for United States Senator in the General Assembly on Tuesday there will be no election. The united claims of Wetmore, Colt and Goddard as to the number of Assemblymen who will support them total 128, while there are only 111 votes, including the vote of the Lieutenant-Governor. The two members from the town of Scituata who were elected presumably as Goddard men are giving the Lincolnites some uneasy moments, as it is now by no means certain that they will cast their ballots for Goddard. Colt is said to have certain in-terests in Scituate which make the repre-sentatives of that town regard him with

It is too late to call a Republican caucus before the balloting begins, but it is proba-ble that a caucus will be called after a few ballots have been taken without result.

From the present outlook it is regarded as possible that a Senator may not be elected at this session.

STORY OF DEPAULTERS BURFAL. RAID AN ITALIAN ARSENA McDermett's Body Said to Rave Been

ASSURT PARK, N. J., Jan. 13.—There is a story here that Charles McDermott, the missing collector of Belmar who disappeared in March, 1900, leaving a shortage of $40,000, is dead and that his body was quietly transported from Virginia about three months ago and interred in the Old Tennant Church graveyard near Freehold. Yesterday the story went the rounds in Belmar and penetrated to other sections of the county where McDermott, who was once a power in Republican politics, is well

A certain railroad baggage master was interrogated on a Pennsylvania train yes-terday. He frankly admitted that about three months ago a body encased in a shipping box, on which was stamped or en graved the name "McDermott," and shipped from Virginia, was brought through on his train and put off at Englishtown. He did not recall from what point in Virginia the body was shipped, but he believed at the time and still believes it was the body of Belmar's missing collector, who since his disappearance six years ago has never been heard from.

Further investigation last night disclosed that about that time a body shipped from Virginia was interred in the Old Tennant Church graveyard near Freehold. Sexton Ephriam Laird, when questioned over the telephone, said after examining his books that the body was that of John G. Gordon, but that undertaker Gilbert Hulee of Englishtown, who had the case, could tell about it. Hulse was called up and he said a body from Virginia was buried at that time, but his recollection was that the man's name was Davison. He said the body came from Elk or Elkton in West Virginia.

body came from Elk or Elkton in West Virginia.
County Clerk Joseph P. McDermott, brother of the missing collector, when asked about the case said that if his brother was dead he knew nothing about it. He said his father's cousin's name was Charles McDermott. He died November 10 and was buried at Trenton and this, he said, probably gave rise to the rumor. The railroad man, however, is positive that he accompanied the body from Philadelphia and that it came from Virginia.

A policy of insurance on the life of the missing collector is still alive and no demand has yet been made upon the company for the money.

McDermott disappeared March 3, 1900, after an interview with Councilman A. W. Bennett. His accounts were $40,000 short. He was never afterward heard from, but it was popularly believed he was living under an assumed name in the South.

PETROSINO DESCENDS ON A! ARMED CELLARFUE.

Men Who Ditin't Have Time to Thron Away Their Weapons Arrested-Vair Scarch for Bocuments Containing

Tips in the form of anonymous letterrecently reached Detective Seggeant Petrosine, who is just now engaged with a numerous squad in running down Black Hand gangs, that if he would make a descent some night into the basement under Charlie Carlisi's saloon, at Thirteenth street and First avenue, he might find something of interest to him. Petrosino at first paid little attention to the suggestion, but the persistence of the writer made him change his mind. With five men, picked because they were good shots and knew how to fight with stilettos if necessary, he went to the place late Saturday night. He put De Martini and Mondo on the front door, Stravani was sent into the saloon to keep a general lookout, while Petrosino, with De Gilio and De Guida, undertook to get into the basement itself through the door leading from the saloon. Only old patrons are allowed to go to the basement, and the detectives were challenged at once. Their answer was to cover the sentry with their revolvers. He opened the door and called out a warning

The detectives found the place in confusion. Several of the twenty-five men there were trying hard to hide away revolvers and knives.

With a threat to shoot the first man to move Petrosino managed to get some kind of order. De Gilio and De Guida were told to search everybody. They were joined a moment later by De Martini and Mondo. Four of the men were found to have .44 calibre revolvers of the very latest Colt pattern, worth not less than $40 each.

Several other revolvers were found on the floor. A number of knives were also picked up. A search was made for some incriminating documents which the anonymous writer said might be found, but without success. The detectives found the place in conincriminating documents which the anonymous writer said might be found, but without success.

The four men who had weapons still in their possession were placed under arrest. They said they were Domenico Broselli, 30 years old, of 43) East Thirteenth street; Salvatore Canezaro, 22, of 538 East Fourteenth street; Vincenso Spargaseo, 30, of 387 Fifth street, and Salvatore F. Gresofi, 33, of 541 East Eleventh street.

When the four were taken to the Tombs police court yesterday morning it was an interesting sight to see the scramble among the lawyers present to get the jobs of defending the prisoners. One lawyer said it meant not less than $500 in any case, and if the men were turned out it was even better.

Magistrate Sweetser held the men in $500 each for Special Sessions. In the meantime Petrosino's men expect to connect some of the men with the numerous Black Hand kidnappings, dynamite outrages, stabbings and other crimes.

None of the four gave bail, but they defiantly announced that there will be plenty of politicians on hand for that purpose this morning.

KIDNAPPING EXTRAORDINARY. Woman Who Cared for Husband's Illegith

mate Child Soon Goes Free. Mrs. Mary Lloyd, the wife of a farmer of Millstone, N. J., twelve years ago took in a new born baby girl, the child of her husband and another woman. The other woman, Miss Helen Seymour of 16 Jerome place, Upper Montclair, N. J., turned up last night as a complainant in the Tenderloin police station. She had had Mrs Lloyd arrested on a charge of attempted

The two women were brought before the rail together. Mary Lloyd was a matronly woman of 83. She showed no signs of need, though she supports her two children, the adopted daughter and herself. Helen Seymour was several years younger and strikingly the more handsome. On one side stood a florid, heavy man, Thomas and renewed his intimacy with Miss Sev-

"This woman has my child hidden away "This woman has my child hidden away somewhere. She won't tell where the child is," began Miae Seymour. Twelve years ago, she explained, she met Lloyd. He was then a farmer with a profitable farm in Milistone and already had two children. A girl baby was born of this intimacy. This child, she explained, was kept in the Lloyd home and she was allowed to visit it. It was named Alice. The child's mother was still allowed to see her after the Lloyds moved to New York, several months ago. But on January 10, she charged, Mrs. Lloyd had taken the child away and kept her whereabouts secret.

Mrs. Lloyd had taken the child away and kept her whereabouts secret.

Sergt. McCarthy asked Mrs. Lloyd what had become of the girl.

"I had to send her to the Sheltering Arms Home on Amsterdam avenue and 127th street," the wife replied "When I had to work to support the children I had to be away all day, and it will be all I can do to keep my own two in the room where we are going. Alice will get treated right at the Sheltering Arms. I said I'd pay $10 a month and they promised she'd be well treated. With what I get I couldn't do more.

a month and they promised she'd be well treated. With what I get I couldn't do more.

"Well, what does this man do?" asked the sergeant, looking at Lloyd.

"Thomas paid for our keep always until the other day," explained his wife. "He did even when he kept company with this woman. He came back to me more than once. He used to spend too much money in the farm days, then he mortgaged the land. When that was foreclosed we came here to live, at 63 Seventh avenue. I move out of there to-morrow to a room at 508 Sixth avenue.

"I took Alice's mother in twelve years ago, and Alice was born in the house. I kept Alice because there was paenty in those days, and her mother wasn't the right sort of a mother for her. That's all the kidnapping there was."

The sergeant asked Mrs. Lloyd if she wanted to make a complaint against her husband for desertion. She declined to do so. Lloyd looked around smiling to see if anything more was wanted of him. Miss Seymour, before leaving with him, said that they had found out what they wanted.
